HUNTRESS

SECURITY AWARENESS TRAINING · HUNTRESS MANAGED SAT

Your firewall can’t stop someone from clicking the link.

Most attacks still start with a person: a convincing email, a fake invoice, a login page that looks right. Training is one of the least expensive controls you can add, and it only works if it actually happens. Pinnacle runs it for you.

Can you answer these today?

01 Does every employee finish their training, or only the ones who remember to?

02 If someone clicked a phishing email this morning, would you know?

03 Does your training match your own policies, or is it a generic slide deck?

What Pinnacle puts in place

Short episodes people finish
Story-driven lessons of about 7 to 10 minutes, assigned and scheduled automatically.

Real-world phishing tests
Simulations based on current attacks, with coaching for anyone who clicks.

Managed for you
Huntress builds and schedules the content; Pinnacle handles enrollment, reminders and follow-up.

Courses from your own policies
Pinnacle builds training from the policies your staff actually signed.

Reports for insurers and auditors
Completion rates, phishing results and progress over time, ready when someone asks.

Part of the same security stack
The same Huntress team that watches your endpoints around the clock.

Why it matters: Cyber insurance applications and the FTC Safeguards Rule both expect security training. Pinnacle runs it alongside the rest of your security, so the proof is already on file when an insurer or auditor asks.

See where your team stands.

Book a no-cost training review. We will look at what your staff gets today, what your insurer and regulators expect, and how a managed program would close the gap.
